

February 4, 2015

Grayson,

Dad told me you ran into _____ on the Internet; he also told me about her reaction to me being your brother. After almost 20 years, I am a bit surprised (but not shocked) she still is bitter towards me. Here is what I remember...

We never ran around in the same circles unless ~~on~~ the Lambda Chi's were mixed with

Anyway, this is all so very insignificant and old. College flings are like high school stories. Basically, two adults

, but one of the parties did not exactly like the end results or being made to feel less valuable than how they perceived themselves.

It has happened to all of us.

Frankly, I think it is extremely immature of her to hold - or threaten to hold - the actions of your brother (and her) from two decades ago against you. That, to me, is a "red flag". It sounds as though she has not grown up much.

In any case, no matter what the slight she feels I made towards her, you can tell her that I have paid off the Karma gods for two lifetimes, I live in fucking Hell! I have had to fight for my right to exist. She can forgive and move on and sleep fine knowing that I have been punished adequately.

Sorry about the rant, but petty shit like making a big deal about not getting her way 20 years ago really is offensive. I know people are going to be harsh to me but I just wish they could keep a little perspective, ~~and~~ show some maturity, and leave my family out of it!

You can wish in one hand and shit in the other. Guess which hand fills up faster?

On a side note, can you please put $100 on my books? I do not want to hit Mom & Dad up because they do so much for me. Lockdown wiped out most of my food. If you can do it, can you please keep it between us, as I do not want them to start feeling like they aren't doing enough?

Thanks, Grayson. I hope things are well for you. Be careful with crazy girls (but do have fun with them :)).

www.iipay.com

Love,
Damon